

Therapeutic procedures are given to patients, the purpose of which is to help them to overcome their emotional difficulties. The therapist works with the patient to help him to overcome his emotional difficulties.

Therapeutic procedures are given to patients in order to help them to overcome their emotional difficulties. The therapist works with the patient to help him to overcome his emotional difficulties. The therapist works with the patient to help him to overcome his emotional difficulties.

Dr. Dora Kaufman, author of "The Psychology of the Child", states that the child's emotional life is a complex one. The child's emotional life is a complex one. The child's emotional life is a complex one.

The author points out that the child's emotional life is a complex one. The child's emotional life is a complex one. The child's emotional life is a complex one.

The author points out that the child's emotional life is a complex one. The child's emotional life is a complex one. The child's emotional life is a complex one.

Thank you very much.