Dear George:

I have been thinking about your letter of March 7 for some time, even before you drew attention to the matter. I agree wholeheartedly that some special consideration should be given to Stewards, but I still don't know what.

It is a difficult thing. For example, if we do what you suggest, cannot others who have supported the Cathedral in other ways object?

I hope we can come up with a way that will work effectively. I doubt that the Cathedral attendance is one of them. Aside from the mechanics, others might wonder about the justice of it. I am not sure myself.

We have the pins now, and in the next few days we will begin sending all stewards a lapel pin and urge them to wear it at all times.

And we will continue to think about what special consideration they might be given.

Best.

Sincerely,

Jack Antreassian
